Mengzhi is a PhD candidate at the Department of Architecture, NUS. Her research interests include urban form, urban space and urban daily life, right to the city, theory and policy of land, finance and management of real estate, as well as ethnography. In her thesis, Mengzhi investigates the interactions between urban fabric and ownership and, more importantly, their mixed effects on urban daily life. This is exemplified in a case study of Yong Qing Fang (永庆坊), an urban renewal area in Guangzhou, China. Mengzhi has a Bachelor's Degree in Urban Planning from Guangzhou University, China. She loves walking and drawing in cities as well as hiking and breathing in nature.
