Drawing on two decades in Singapore's Public Service – including working at the Urban Redevelopment Authority on Marina Bay and Jurong Lake District – Yi Lin brings keen interest and expertise in placemaking to public space studies.

Alongside being a PhD student at the National University of Singapore's (NUS) Department of Architecture, she leads community engagement and placemaking initiatives at Science Centre Singapore.

Yi Lin holds a Bachelor of Laws from NUS and was awarded the Ministry of Communications & Information Gold Medal for graduating top of her cohort with a Master of Science in Information Studies from Nanyang Technological University (NTU) in 2025.
