

Wang, Mingqi

RESEARCH AREA: Urban climate, Building Energy Consumption

Department of Architecture,
College of Design and Engineering,
National University of Singapore,
4 Architecture Drive, Singapore
117566

Email: 1144116@u.nus.edu

ResearchGate

LinkedIn

Wang Mingqi is a PHD student at the Urban Climate Design Laboratory of the Department of Architecture at the National University of Singapore. She holds a Master's degree in Architecture Technology from Southeast University.

Her research interests include climate sensitive urban planning and resilient urban design. She is dedicated to research on microclimate sensitivity, regional energy planning, and human thermal comfort assessment. Recently, her work is focused on the coupling dynamic simulation and measurement of urban microclimate and energy consumption demand in Singapore.